When the Christmas Spirit returns again.

We hope you will have . . . A Happy New Year all year long!

May we arrange our minds in 2012 to love life and serve others.
We have a choice, you know!
Don't count the days . . . Make the days count!

On Finding Rosies and Rosebuds

They are out there—we just need to find them!

In an effort to locate Rosies, I decided to try the media, and I found that a short article in the smaller “hometown” newspapers is an effective way. Sometimes they are more willing to publish articles than are the larger papers.

From one small newspaper in Alabama, I received calls from women who had been riveters, welders, machinists, had made ammunition, and worked on the assembly line in places like Lockheed, Consolidated, Wainwright shipyard, and Naval Air Stations in places from Mobile, Alabama to Ypsilanti, Michigan. None of these women had ever heard of ARRA. An article from you in a small, hometown newspaper near you might get similar results.

We have potential members everywhere We all know someone who is eligible but is not a member. So, ladies, it is up to us to reach them. If you know a potential member, Rosie or Rosebud, let me know and I’ll get the information to them.

Marjorie Hobbs—not Maxine Hobbs—is the author of “Ode to the Foreman,” a poem that was printed in the last issue of Rosie’s Mail Call. Marjorie wrote the poem in 1942 while working at the Consolidated Aircrafts Corporation in Fort Worth, Texas. The staff of the Mail Call regret the error and are happy to make this correction.

Chapter Updates

Two chapters have reported electing new officers for the coming year:

Florence Carter, Treasurer

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma Chapter

Terry S. Thompson, President

Some of the Birmingham Chapter members in the Birmingham Veterans Day Parade.

The Birmingham, Alabama Chapter recently participated in Birmingham’s annual Veterans Day Parade, with 4 vehicles and 15 Rosies, Rosebuds, and Rivets. As “The Boogie Woo-gie Bugle Boy of Company B” blared forth from a mobile sound system and the vehicles sported signs that read “We Supported the Troops” and “Working Women of World War II” and, of course, “We Can (Still!) Do It!” the ARRA delegation paid quite a tribute to veterans and Rosies.

The Baker’s Dozen Chapter of Phenix City, Alabama/Columbus, Georgia planned a December “Holiday Social” for members and guests, held at Fort Benning. The program included entertainment by Rosies, Rosebuds, veterans and others, a dramatic presentation of Rosie the Riveter, and a tour of the World War II Street at the National Infantry Museum.

Let’s hear from other chapters! Send news to Fran Carter, 209 University Park Drive, Birmingham, AL 35209; email fran.carter@juno.com. The deadlines are January 1, April 1, July 1, October 1. And if you aren’t near a local chapter of ARRA, YOU could start one! Contact our Vice President for Expansion, Mandy Cooley, 8456 E. Montebello Avenue, Scottsdale, AZ 85250; azcooley@cox.net.

Some Rosies I Never Knew

By Rivet John Carter

Sgt. John Carter
in 1945

During the War, I had a paratrooper buddy in Europe named Claude whose girlfriend had a job stuffing the goodies into K-ration boxes. (K-rations consisted of food items in a box the size of a Cracker Jacks box that we could carry in our pocket and eat, no matter where we were.) She could sometimes write notes and sneak them into the boxes. Claude kept hoping to get one of the notes—and so did we. We never did find a note, but we did appreciate Claude's Rosie for helping to provide us with K-rations.

Another Rosie that we've learned about got a job when she was 15 years old cracking eggs all day long. (I'll bet another Rosie took care of the chickens that laid the eggs.) Anyway, these eggs were dried into a powder and shipped to military units overseas, where they were reconstituted and scrambled. We appreciate these Rosies' work, too; but I must say those eggs were terrible!

In 1944, I was with a paratrooper unit deployed in the mountains along the French-Italian border, and I'm sure some Rosies must have been involved in providing us with a turkey for Thanksgiving dinner. Along with our allotment of C-rations that morning (they're different from K-rations), there was a frozen turkey. It seems that General Eisenhower had decreed that all the troops under his command should have turkey for Thanksgiving. The trouble was, none of us knew what to do with it, but I was the one that got stuck trying.

We found a farm family that agreed to let us use their kitchen, and then they left. Their kitchen stove didn't have an oven. If you ever need to cook a Thanksgiving turkey under those conditions, here's how:

Tell the 'troopers to come back about 2 o'clock for dinner, but in the meantime bring you anything else they can scrounge to go with the turkey. They will bring potatoes, apples, eggs and assorted cans of C-rations: corn, pork and beans, spaghetti, etc.

Build a fire in stove. Put water from the well into a small tub and put turkey on to boil. After two hours take turkey out and use bayonet to cut into smaller pieces so it will cook faster. That's when you will discover the package of giblets that had been packed inside him. Put everything back into tub. If you can find any salt and pepper, add it. Slice potatoes and apples and add them to tub with turkey. Crack eggs and put in tub. Then open C-ration cans and empty into tub (doesn't matter what is in them). Keep adding water as needed.

When 'troopers start coming in at 2 o'clock tell them it's not ready yet, but if they have to go back to duty they can use bayonet to cut off any meat that is done and fish around for anything else they want. At 3:30 you can see if anything is left for you.

I had planned for us all to pause and have a Thanksgiving prayer before we ate, but it didn't work out that way. I hope God will forgive us. And General Eisenhower should have been proud of us for obeying his orders and eating turkey for Thanksgiving.

But we surely wished he had sent a Rosie along to cook the thing!

Rosebud: Female descendant of a Rosie or Rosie Volunteer (daughter, granddaughter, etc.)

Auxiliary member (Rivet): Male descendant, or spouse of a Rosie, Rosie Volunteer, or Rosebud.

Many Rosebuds/Rivets join for their deceased Rosie. Everyone gets an attractive certificate and a subscription to Rosie's Mail Call newsletter.

Update on Benefit for Veterans and Widows

Congratulations! Somebody is reading the Mail Call! In our last issue, we published an article about a little-known benefit, known as the Aid and Attendance Benefit, that is available to veterans and their widows who are in need of home care or institutional care. We offered to send further information to anyone who is interested, and to date 22 readers have responded and asked for the information. If you missed the article, and someone you know might be in need of this care (up to $1,940 per month), look on page 8 of the last issue of the Mail Call or contact Fran Carter at (205) 822-4106 or fran.carter@juno.com for more information.

There are some restrictions on eligibility, but a knowledgeable attorney or someone in a Veterans organization might guide you through them. We have been assured that this is not welfare, but a benefit that the veteran has earned, yet only one veteran in seven knows about it.

And by the way, if you do apply, and if you do learn anything in the process that could help another interested veteran or his widow, we'd love to hear from you.

PBS Seeking Info About Rosies

Recently, ARRA was contacted by a staff person from the Public Broadcasting Service television series called History Detectives. This series focus on artifacts submitted by viewers that reveal compelling, but often little-known information about American history. Producers are looking for information about women who worked at the Vega Aircraft Corporation at the Lockheed Air Terminal in Burbank (later known as Lockheed Plant A) during 1942-43., and would especially like to talk to anyone who worked with a Rosie named Dora Riley.

If you or someone you know worked at this location during the war, please contact Rachel Ross, Associate Producer, Lion TV, History Detectives on PBS, at (917) 606-3860, or email Rachel.Ross@liontv.us.
